

Who is our Security?

How do you deal with the threats in today's modern world? Come and hear Fred's story about how God has led him from a humble upbringing to be a defender of our homeland

LUNCHEON

Downtown Baltimore CBMC

Presents

Fred

National Security and Intelligence Expert

Christian Business Men's Connection

Fred is a National Security and Intelligence Expert with over 35 years of knowledge and experience in the National Defense, Homeland Security, Cyber and Intelligence communities. While much of this experience is grounded in intelligence operations and the training, education, and the curricula management fields, over 20 years working in the private sector and academia focused on support to Government clients in critical national security and defense positions; homeland security market-shaping and analysis; and building Government-Industry-Academia relationships and partnerships for success. Currently working anti-terrorism and critical infrastructure protection issues.

As his faith journey has deepened, he has learned that the greatest threats we face are not necessarily those we most readily see around us. Come and hear Fred's story about how God has led him from a humble, broken upbringing through a career that has allowed him to be more aware of the threats we face in our modern world.

Fred has served on the Board of a regional technology council; the Maryland Cyber Commission; and the National STEM Consortium Advisory Committee. He is married, has four grown children and six grandchildren.
