Tony's midlife crisis arrived late, as he likes to say. Gone were the days of seeing bikers on the road — and wishing. Instead, he was on the seat of his first bike ready to ride. To that point, his entire riding career had been on the training lot. Now it was the real thing. It was time for his own kickstand to be up and to take the bike on the road. In less than a mile, he was hooked.

Join us and hear the rest of Tony's story. We are sure you will enjoy his humor and appreciate his insights.
